

COVID-19 APPEAL

CAN YOU HELP YOUR LOCAL HOSPICE?

The Covid-19 virus has had an extraordinary impact on our lives already and we face further challenges ahead. These are tough times but the patients who call our 'Mac Unit' home, now need our nurses, doctors and volunteers more than ever.

Our NHS is doing an incredible job and the staff in our specialist palliative care unit are under so much pressure too. Our patients are all vulnerable – in the unit and at home – and our nurses and doctors have families they want to protect but they are giving their all to help our patients, keep the unit running and continue delivering the highest standard of care. We are now asking you to join us and show them how much we appreciate their dedication and selflessness.

We are an independent charity, relying heavily on the generosity of our community. However, we now need you more than ever. Our patients are isolated from their loved ones and our incredible staff and volunteers are continuing to give everything to care for them.

Please show your support by making a donation, however small, to Macmillan Caring Locally and let our nurses, doctors and volunteers know that you are there for them.

You can donate securely through our web site here

Thank you!
